3 FOUND GUILTY BY U. S. JURORS IN FRAUD TRIAL

Using Mails to Defraud Charge against Youngstown Man

FOURTH CASE IS STILL PENDING One Defendant, Admitted Ambulance Chaser, Sentenced

CLEVELAND, Feb. 7.—While a federal jury yesterday afternoon was finding three Youngstown men guilty of using the mails to defraud, Joseph Wald, confessed ambulance chaser who pleaded guilty to similar charges, was being sentenced to two years in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., with a $3,500 fine.

Early in the evening following Wald's sentence, the jury returned a verdict of guilty against Dr. W. Weikendand, Atty. Vincent Buonpane and George Mores, in the insurance fraud cases.

Two Year Terms
Wald was sentenced by Federal Judge Samuel West to two-year terms in each of two cases, the sentences to run concurrently, and was fined $500 on each of seven counts to which he had pleaded guilty. The maximum sentence is five years and $5,000.

Mary Brown, who had also pleaded guilty to similar charges, was given a four-month sentence in the county jail here on each indictment, the sentences to run concurrently.

Before the conviction of Dr. Weikendand, Atty. Buonpane and Mores in the third of four scheduled indictments to be tried, Judge West ordered the dismissal of Dr. Joseph Colla and William F. Grady stating that there was nothing in the evidence to show that they had knowledge that the false claims were placed in the U. S. mails, or that they had knowledge that the mails were used to defraud.

Calley on Different Counts
Dr. Weikendand and Atty. Buonpane were found guilty by the jury on counts one and three of the indictment and Mores was found guilty of count three.

The first count charges that the defendants caused to be placed in the U. S. mails at Youngstown a letter to Hartford, Conn., signed by H. L. Smith of the Youngstown Accident & Indemnity Co., which described an alleged accident where in James Fedele of Toledo reported to the company that his automobile was in an accident at Wickliffe boulevard in which Arthur Neff, Phil Muntean and William Saunders were injured.

Institute Branch of Sons of Legion
The Salem branch of the Sons of the Legion was instituted at preliminary ceremonies last night by Charles H. Carey post, No. 56, at the post rooms.

Talks were given by Post Commander Ross Helman, Everett Rich, chairman in charge of the organization work, and W. R. Pearce.

Arrangements are being perfected for the public ceremony which will be held Monday evening at the Memorial building.

Occupancy Nears

LISBON, Feb. 7.—Unless there is a sudden change in plans, the new office of County Recorder Jesse Calhoun, in the courthouse will be occupied Friday. Filing systems have been installed. The three offices have yet to be cleaned.

Davey's Anger Mounts While Senate Lags On Appointments

THREATENS TO "DO SOMETHING"

As Governor Frets, Solons Consider One-House Assembly Plan

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Feb. 7.—Governor Davey grew more impatient today with the senate where his cabinet appointments have lain for 21 days with only one being confirmed. Chafing under the delay, he threatened to do something about it.

"If the senate does not act pretty soon on confirmations," he announced, "I intend to make a public demand for action."

One House Proposed
As the governor fretted over the senatorial procrastination, the legislature received a resolution which would revamp the general assembly into one house, reducing the senate to a "legislative council" to advise the chief executive.

The resolution, introduced by Rep. William M. Boyd, Cleveland Democrat, would require a favorable vote of three-fourths of the membership to enact a bill. The governor and administrative heads of the executive departments would sit in the assembly and discuss proposed laws.

The senate would meet separately once a month to advise the governor on matters of state and policy. Its members would be elected for four-year terms. Representatives would be elected for two-year terms.

Observers feel, however, it will be some time before Ohio has, if it ever does, a unicameral legislature. A recent poll of the legislators revealed most of them want to see how a similar experiment progresses in Nebraska. A constitutional amendment would be necessary to effect such a change.

Governor May Be Favorable
In his present mood, some say, the governor might be tempted to see a point in reducing the senate to his advisory committee.

The one confirmation of a cabinet appointment—Alfred A. Benesch, of Cleveland, as commerce director—was necessary because of an emergency. The liquidation of banks and difficulties in the building and loan situation demanded immediate attention.

The other appointments are not expected to be brought upon the floor of the senate before next week. And as each day passes more hostility toward the governor appears. Confirmation of Mrs. Margaret Allman as welfare director has been delayed for two reasons. First, some senators wanted assurance she would retain Darrell Jones of Newark as her assistant; second, that M. L. Brown of Springfield would be kept in the department as chief of the old age pension division.

Davey last week appointed Oakley Spaght of Akron to replace Jones. Yesterday he announced "Brown must go."

Senatorial ire also has been aroused by the resignation of W. H. Amrine, superintendent of the London prison farm. Amrine tendered his resignation rather than make

A Washington and Lincoln program was given last evening at the meeting of Perry grange. The program follows: Songs by the grange; roll call; "Has been from facts" relating to Washington or Lincoln, or by telling an incident of the Civil War; poem, "The Lincoln Penny"; Mrs. O. E. Bush.

PASTORS OPPOSE PAROCHIAL HELP

Map Campaign At Columbus Convention To Keep Such Aid From Materializing

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 7.—Despite charges of hypocrisy, the Ohio Pastors' convention today stood opposed to state aid for parochial schools and mapped a fight to prevent such aid from materializing. A storm broke out in the convention when the Rev. H. Geisweil, Baptist minister from Cincinnati, submitted the report of the committee on state aid for parochial schools. Although Mr. Geisweil asserted "the issue is not a religious one," several ministers charged the stand was hypocritical and asked the convention to face the issue "squarely as one of religion."

Mr. Geisweil countered with the assertion that such action would alienate the support of lay groups, among them, he said, several fraternal organizations. He said these groups would support the measure only if the opposition was based on law and economics.

The convention forthwith adopted the resolution last night and voted to request the Ohio Council of Churches to appoint a "permanent committee of 10, to perfect an organization for the spreading of information and the rallying of forces necessary for x x x the protection of public money for public schools only."

The convention also adopted a resolution opposing compulsory military drill for college students, and accepted the report of the Rev. G. R. Siegenthaler, pastor of St. John's Evangelical and Reformed church, which provided for a bill legalizing optional drill to be presented to the legislature.

Other resolutions endorsed continued investigation and nationalization of the munitions industry, adherence to the world court, and an inquiry directed to congressmen regarding the terms under which the United States would "relate itself to the league of nations."

Army Major's Trial Nears Conclusion

(By Associated Press)
TOPEKA, Kas., Feb. 7.—The defense neared the end of its case in the federal court murder trial of Maj. Charles A. Shepard today, still contending that the second wife of the retired army medical officer suffered from a mental disorder and probably committed suicide.

Attorneys for the 63-year-old defendant, who is accused by the government of poisoning Mrs. Zenana Shepard at Fort Riley, Kas., 5 1/2 years ago, said they expected to exhaust their list of witnesses within a few hours.

Miss Grace Brandon, one-time sweetheart of the officer, and chief government witness, still is here, but has not been in the courtroom for two days. The government contends the motive for the alleged crime was the defendant's desire to marry Miss Brandon, 28-year-old Brookfield, Tex., stenographer.

Student Missing

COLUMBUS, Feb. 7.—Search for Morris D. Scott, 20, missing Ohio State university student, entered its fourth day today. He is 6 feet tall, weighs 145 pounds, has sandy hair and gray eyes, and was wearing a gray suit and overcoat when last seen. The youth sustained a severe bump on the head in a fall last week.

SENATE HEARS SCHOOL REMEDY

Plan Would Let Hard-Pressed Districts Issue Script

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Feb. 7.—A plan under which hard-pressed school districts could issue scrip against anticipated sales tax revenue was considered today in the senate.

It was brought forward as Joseph W. Fichter, assistant state director of education, asserted a fourth of the counties face school deficits ranging as high as $200,000 this year.

A legislative appropriation, he said, seems to be the only means of supplying them funds, but conceded such a proposal might meet opposition since the state must raise approximately $15,000,000 to match federal relief funds.

Per Pupil Basis
Under the plan for allocation of sales tax funds to schools no distribution will be made until July 15. Then it will be to districts on a per pupil basis.

Meanwhile Senator John Hunter (D.) of Lucas county said many districts will be in dire need of funds. In an effort to alleviate hardships a committee of which he is a member appointed four members to work out a scrip or anticipatory note plan.

The committee considered a suggestion which would permit schools to issue the scrip and be paid by the state treasurer, before sales tax funds actually were turned over to their districts.

Willoughby Group Entertained Here By Trades Class

A joint dinner meeting of the Trades classes of Willoughby and Salem was held Wednesday evening at the English Lutheran church with 76 in attendance.

Seventeen members of the Willoughby class and their guests were present and over 40 members of the Salem class. The guest list also included instructors and guests from the manufacturing plants sponsoring such schools.

The welcome was given by Rev. G. D. Keister, pastor of the Lutheran church. The major part of the program consisted of a panel discussion of the fundamentals of metallurgy, led by Chairman Ralph Perrine, instructor in the Salem class. H. W. Cameron, instructor, gave a brief review of the history of the Salem Trades class since its inauguration five years ago. Mr. Cameron complimented the plant instructors, charter members and others responsible for the organization and success of the class.

Following the dinner and program the Trades Class Basketball league of northeastern Ohio was officially opened by a game between the Willoughby and Salem teams at the Memorial building, in which the Salem team emerged the victor.

Seeks Damages for Stream Pollution

LISBON, Feb. 7.—Back in 1896 a restraining order was issued in court here against Columbus county and the county home from polluting Cold Run which flows through a 400-acre farm of G. F. Mason, located at the intersection of the Lincoln highway and the Lisbon-Guilford rd. The order was made permanent as of Dec. 1, 1897. The court held that it would take about a year for the county to change conditions at the county home, so that the stream would again become purified.

Nothing was done, it appears, according to a petition filed in court here today against the county by Mason, who now seeks $1,000 damages for stream pollution.

Plans were laid for a Washington's birthday celebration for local lodges, to be held Feb. 22. Entertainment and a dance are scheduled. Don Carey is chairman of the entertainment committee.

MAY TIGHTEN MONOPOLY LAW

NRA Expected To Enforce Anti-Trust Restrictions

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—President Roosevelt, an informed source said today, would like congress to change a portion of the national industrial recovery act so the anti-trust laws would apply more closely than in the past.

This disclosure was called important by Democratic leaders in congress, who looked upon it as a means of meeting "monopoly" accusations. They recalled Clarence Darrow's findings that NRA was fostering monopoly, and Senator Borah's belief that the "little fellow" was being hampered.

The congressional leaders gathered late yesterday with President Roosevelt in a conference when they decided upon extending NRA's basic principles for two more years.

Labor Representation
From another source it was learned that one of the features the President does not want changed is Section 7-A, which guarantees the right of labor to bargain freely and without coercion through representatives of its own choosing.

Just what bearing, if any, this has on the recent disagreement between the administration and the leadership of the American Federation of Labor was not stated. Though the federation leader, William Green, some time ago expressed the opinion that Section 7-A should be continued unchanged, some other labor circles have desired alterations.

They have said that the section should be revamped to eliminate "company unions." Industrial leaders, fighting such changes, have sought alterations of their own. For one thing, they have said, the law should prohibit "coercion" by union men or other groups of employees as well as by employers.

Clerk Testimony In Ohio Pen Probe Denied By Emmons

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 7.—Ralph W. Emmons, chairman of the state civil service commission, today branded as untrue testimony given by the senate prison investigating committee by Daniel J. Bonzo, chief record clerk.

Bonzo testified that applicants for positions as guards at Ohio penitentiary were given civil service examinations by an examining board comprised of three prison employees.

"Every examination given at the penitentiary has been prepared by the civil service commission and graded by the commission," Emmons said. "A representative of the commission has attended every examination. I think three representatives were at the last examination."

Emmons said boards similar to that at the prison assist the commission in giving examinations at other state institutions.

Garfield grange will confer the first and second degrees on a class at Willow Grove grange Friday evening. Following the degree work, refreshments will be served.

POLICE SEEKING STATE SENATOR

Kentucky Lawmaker Hunted On Forgery Charge By Police Of Two States

(By Associated Press)
CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 7.—Kentucky State Senator John T. Murphy today was a fugitive sought by police of two states, Ohio and Kentucky, for a charge of forgery. He was charged with forging a check for $10,000 in Frankfort, Ky., by Albert B. Chandler, at that time acting governor.

Today, Chandler was out of the state—in Indiana—and the acting governor was State Senator Robert Humphreys, president pro tem of the senate. He was the third chief executive Kentucky has had in less than 24 hours.

It was rumored that Governor Ruby Laffoon had cut short his stay in Washington, and was returning to the Kentucky capital, but there appeared to be as much uncertainty as to the whereabouts of Murphy, who was variously reported to be in Washington and in his home town, Covington, Ky.

Two representatives of the county's prosecutor's office returned from Frankfort early today, with the requisition papers, signed late yesterday by Governor Davey, in Columbus.

Then followed a dash by automobile to Frankfort for Chandler's signature, which had been promised by him, for a year or more.

Meanwhile, expressions of satisfaction came from Louis J. Schneider, county prosecutor. "Now if we can just find Mr. Murphy," he mused.

Emil Gau and Simon Leis, assistants, who made the trip to Columbus and Frankfort, announced they would press the search immediately.

Woman, 102, Seeking To Become Citizen

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Sophia Zove of Marianna has decided she wants to live her second century as an American citizen. Although 102 years old, she applied for first naturalization papers today. It will take two years to get final papers.

"I'll be there to get them," she told admiring friends. Mrs. Zove stated she was born Dec. 10, 1832, in Nudlock, Austria, and came to the United States when 65.

UPHOLDS OHIO MILK CONTROL

Commission Head Says Marketing Laws Best In United States

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Feb. 7.—Harry Ballman, chairman of the Ohio Milk Marketing commission, told a legislative investigating committee last night that Ohio's milk marketing law is the best of its kind in the United States and needs only few changes to make it work smoother.

Ballman and C. G. McBride, executive secretary of the commission, testified before a special house committee appointed at the request of Governor Davey to determine as to whether the law should be re-enacted in its present form, or whether it was necessary to make changes in the law have been criticized considerably.

Both officials insisted the law has worked favorably in stabilizing the milk industry except in the Cleveland area.

He explained, however, that the Cleveland groups have "found themselves" after threatened collapse of their course. They appealed to the commission to step in and take charge of the entire situation, he said.

Roosevelt Favors New Legislation On Tax Securities

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—President Roosevelt has informed congressional leaders, an authoritative source said today, that when the time is ripe he proposes to ask legislation permitting the United States to tax securities of types now tax-exempt.

The change would not apply to securities now outstanding, it was said, nor would it be suggested until the federal government, the 48 states and the thousands of other political subdivisions are out of the depression woods.

The treasury's position, as expressed before house committees last year by Secretary Morgenthau and still apparently unchanged, is that taxation of exempt securities is a good policy—"for the future."

One reason for delay, it was reported by the house member who preferred not to be quoted by name, was that the federal government itself must increase its debt over large borrowings in the next fiscal year.

Garage Destroyed By Fire Wednesday

Flames from a blow torch ignited dripping gasoline from a portable grain grinder in the garage of Clyde Aldridge on the Salem-Lisbon rd at 2 p. m. Wednesday. The fire badly damaged both grinder and building.

The Lisbon fire department responded to a still alarm as did a chemical truck from the Salem fire department. The loss has been estimated by firemen at $500. A nearby chicken coop caught fire but was quickly extinguished.

BRUNO'S HEARING NEAR END

Lawyers Battle Over Nail Holes In Kidnap Ladder

(By Associated Press)
FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 7.—The defense of Bruno Richard Hauptmann expects to rest before the day is over.

Chief Counsel Edward J. Reilly, before he went into court this morning, said he believed he would complete the case for the German carpenter by adjournment time this afternoon.

The state expects to use one day in rebuttal and Reilly hopes to gain an adjournment over Saturday so that he can make the defense summation on Monday.

BY WILLIAM A. KINNEY

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 7.—A defense expert for Bruno Richard Hauptmann today insisted that incriminating nail holes appearing in the Lindbergh kidnap ladder did not appear when he examined the ladder less than a month after the crime.

Stands Pat On Views
Dr. E. M. Hudson, who testified there was only one square nail hole in a rail of the ladder which the state charges came from Hauptmann's attic, declared that not even government reports on the ladder would cause him to change his testimony on the point.

Police and state experts testified the four nail holes in the upright, which is in evidence, jibed with nail holes in joists of Hauptmann's attic.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz showed him a photograph and asked: "Assuming that this picture were taken in March, 1932, would you agree that possibly you were mistaken in your testimony?"

"Well, under your premise I would say yes," he said. "Shortly later."

"If this rail had been examined by persons other than the state police or New Jersey, in March, April and May, 1932, and reports were filed during those months showing these four nail holes would that induce you to believe that possibly you were mistaken?"

"No, sir, that wouldn't."

"If the United States government report showed in 1932 that there were four nail holes, the four very nail holes, would that lead you to change your mind?"

"No, sir, it would not."

Strong Link For State
The ladder rail was considered one of the state's strongest links in the circumstances by which it seeks to send Hauptmann to the electric chair for the kidnaping and murder of baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

Dr. Hudson at first said he made notes on nail holes in the ladder, but later testified he didn't know if he did.

The attorney general showed him a ladder upright, pointed to nail holes.

"Do you remember that nail hole when you saw it?" he asked.

THE STAMP BUSINESS

A bill introduced by Sen. Morris for the purpose of making the post office department a business institution under a non-partisan postmaster general seems a little behind the times. The post office department already is a business institution.Take the matter of stamps and stamp collectors.
Here is a product and here is a market. Postmaster General Farley has seen his duty and performed it promptly. The philatelic agency of the department is expected to do a million dollar business this year selling first issues of special stamps. Last year it made $861,723. In 1933 it made only $302,619. If the stamp collectors stay solvent and Postmaster General Farley doesn't give away too many souvenirs here will be one of the nation's major businesses in a few more years.

ACCESSION

Col. C. O. Sherrill's willingness to serve as head of a group of executives directing a survey of Ohio government preparatory to reorganization is gratifying.
Col. Sherrill owns a reputation earned by converting Cincinnati from one of the country's worst governed cities to one which now is a model for good government.His acceptance of the position offered him by Gov.
Davey helps the prestige of the governor's reorganization program materially. There have been a few signs that political motives are behind the desire to decrease the number of state employees. It would be tempting, naturally, to weed out Republicans and to retain Democrats.Col. Sherrill, vice president of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Co., would not have time to be party to any plan of whose honesty he was not confident. Presumably, Gov. Davey has been able to convince him that he can afford to lend his experience and knowledge of government to the state for a worthy purpose.
Possibilities of improvement are limitless. Gov. Davey, with Col. Sherrill's help, can make Ohio as favorably conspicuous as Cincinnati has become if he has as much courage and initiative as were shown in that city.

LABOR

Angry statements exchanged between Donald R.
Richberg and spokesmen for the American Federation of Labor, are the sign of an important condition in relationship between the new deal and organized labor. At best, this condition promises to lead to an estrangement. At worst, it may lead to open conflict.
Had the American Federation of Labor gained the privilege it sought last spring of becoming sole spokesmen for labor in the automobile industry, it inevitably would have become an increasingly important factor in the industrial and business structure. It did not gain the privilege. As a result it has not been unable to make important strides toward its goal of becoming the powerful organization it would like to be. It is fighting for existence as an independent, powerful labor organization.This is the most important fact of all to remember in the next few months. The American Federation of Labor has turned on the new deal with bitter criticism. It has undertaken to ruin Mr. Richberg, despite his record as an eminent champion of labor. By inference, it has threatened President Roosevelt himself because he has not acceded to the federation's demands. By continuing the automobile industry's case against the American Federation of Labor's objections, President Roosevelt revealed a new conviction in his administration's policy regarding the organization."We have been accustomed to a discussion of codes being imposed on industry, but this time a code is imposed on labor," commented William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, on hearing about President Roosevelt's extension of the automobile code. This is a significant statement. The most ardent champions of the federation cannot be blind to the organization's present position. It has lost the unqualified support of the Roosevelt administration.
Unless extreme care is exercised, it may lose the administration's qualified support, also.

THE STARS SAY

For Friday, February 8.

A day of great and surprising significance is pre-saged from the predominant lunar aspects. There is probability of a sudden avalanche of the most unexpected visitations, possibly uprooting from old interests, environs and associations. And these are attended by excitement, discord, tumult and other inimical conditions which might prove ruinous conditions which might prove ruinous unless controlled by calm demeanor, wise counsel and very shrewd judgment.
Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of whirlwind activities, with sudden change, new contacts and interests. But possible advantages should not be dissipated by storm and tempest, excitement, impetuosity and hasty judgments.A child born on this day may be versatile, industrious and keen toward the strange, revolutionary and unusual in its activities.

Notable activity: William T. Sherman, general, U. S. A.

Arthur Brisbane, usually an unrelenting and consistent opponent of any move to hook his country up with Europe, has yielded a point by praising Roosevelt's advocacy of a trans-Atlantic line of dirigibles.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The Dear Noel crowd wandered out after the first night's plumed performance recently, a bit bewildered. All the familiar ingredients had been offered—a Coward authorship, Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and a Tiffany audience. But things didn't jell.The usual bright heavens fairly crashed about the Coward worshippers. They had witnessed his first flop in America. No amount of cheering or stamped-ing could save it. Not even the presence of Noel himself, who admits he has "achieved a definite publicity value."All the newspaper critics used their broad axes next day without exception, and George Jean Nathan is to be heard from. The fact is the dam of tolerance built up for Coward simply burst under the strain. Nearly all his plays, threaded with perversion, have been saved by brilliant dialogue.Notably "Private Lives," "The Vortex," and "Design for Living." But whiplash sophistication could not save this one. When a barefoot beastman of a Caribbean island spat once in the face of his refined looking mistress the audience shuddered. The second time it reached for its hat. Not even a Coward can begin to spit.The New Yorker and its fudge-man, Alexander Woollcott, are bowing stiffly these days and Woolcott, at least temporarily, has vanished from his accustomed page. According to the Algonquin gossip the break was over a matter of selection. Woollcott—it's becoming a nuisance spelling it that way—had been out over the department store book belt authorizing his best seller. On such excursions he picked up a number of Pullman car Decemrons which he relied in his weekly essay. The New Yorker thought them too ancient and suggested he return to his murder monographs or pat-a-cake whimsy. This sent the essayist fluttering off in high dudgeon. So he refused to write and The New Yorker, waiting for him to cool off, got another boy.Humorists seem to pair off together. Donald Ogden Stewart and Robert C. Benchley are inseparable in New York or Hollywood. And there is that long standing friendship between Corey Ford and Frank Sullivan. Irvin Cobb and Will Rogers spend much leisure together on the coast. Chie Sale and Homer Croy have been buddies for 20 years. Then, of course, there's the long alliance between Charles V.
MacArthur and Ben Hecht, Phil Baker and Ben Bernie, the Jack Bennys and Burns and Allen, Al
Jolson and Jack Warner, George Jessel and Eddie Cantor, etc.There was analogy in real life in the part Tallulah Bankhead played in a recent and rather depressing drama. In the play she was a tortuously beglamoured lady, doomed to die. With six months to live, she embarked on her last days with a spirit of hoopla. Although Miss Bankhead has been restored to health, there was a period several years ago when she was precariously ill. Yet not many friends who gathered at her bedside knew it. She kept them buoyed and laughing, so much so "to turn in to see Tallulah" was a part of a gay evening out.Most people look upon Jules Brulatour, the husband of Hope Hampton, as a Frenchman. He speaks the language in true Parisian tongue and has the manner and the savoir-faire of the Gallic aristocrat meandering the boulevard for his afternoon constitutional. The name, too, might appropriately decorate the facade of a grand magazine. Yet Brulatour is 100 per cent American, born in Louisiana. He also suggests Caesar in profile on a rare old coin.Thingumabobs: John L. Horgan, Broadway hotel

ORIGINS OF WORLD COURT

Editor, The News:

Although in a general way man-Americans are aware of the fact that the World Court originated, so far as concrete plans and programs are concerned, in the United States, most are vague about it.
It is not misinformed. While the Court is a live public issue this aspect of its background is worth noting.It was Noah Worcester, a Connecticut minister, founder of the Massachusetts Peace society, who first specifically voiced the idea.
Ever since 800 B. C. international federations had existed. League of nations on a world scale had been advocated sporadically ever since the 14th century; and for many years prior to 1814, when Worcester first formulated his proposal, the concept of an international congress and court had been discussed in scholarly treatises. But in 1814 Worcester published his tract, "A Solemn Review of the Custom of War," in which he said: "If the regard of people could be opened in regard to the evils and delusions of war, would it not be easy to form a confederacy of nations, and organize a high court of equity, to decide national controversies? Why might not such a court be composed of some of the most eminent characters from each nation; and a compliance with the decision of the court be made a point of national honor to prevent the effusion of blood and to preserve the blessings of peace?"In the world's first peace worker, "The Friend of Peace," Worcester wrote in 1870 that disarmament was required, but would need to be bulwarked by a congress of nations, one of whose major duties would be "to organize a High Tribunal for the adjustment of disputes between the several powers, and thus prevent the crimes and miseries of war."In 1930 an active peace worker of Boston circulated a petition among the masses (neglecting purposely all known peace advocates) and secured "many signatures." The petition urged upon Congress the establishment of a "Court of Nations." By this time William Ladd to whom, erroneously, the first moves for a World Court are usually attributed because of his stalwart work for peace, had begun to disseminate propaganda for the project on a wide scale, and gave it his organizing ability. Thus in 1835, incredible as it may seem, the Massachusetts State Senate endorsed the plan in a general way by a vote of 19 to 5. Two years later, a definite project calling for the federal government to move for an International Congress and a World Court went through the Massachusetts Senate by 35 to 5 and unanimously in the House. Ef-Efforts to strengthen the Tri-buna at the Second Hague Conference in 1907 failed over difficulties in electing judges. The present World Court, or technically, Permanent Court of International Justice, was established by provision of Article 14 in the League of Nations Covenant. It was definitely formed on Sept. 14, 1921, at Lausanne ratification of the establishing protocol by 26 nations, four more than the required majority.
By 1934 the total number of nations in the Court was 61.We hope that the United States will not be the last one to enter.

Don't Neglect "Baby Teeth"

To neglect the temporary teeth, the "milk teeth," as they are more commonly called, is almost understandable. These teeth, twenty in number, are replaced by the permanent teeth some time between the ages of six and twelve years.The permanent teeth are definitely influenced by the health of the temporary teeth. It is now known to be a fact that neglect of the milk teeth leads up to faulty development of the permanent teeth.In spite of this knowledge, reports continue to show that at least 90 per cent of young children have dental defects. In most instances these defects could have been prevented and then the dental decay of later life would have been avoided. This happens because of the mistaken idea that, since the milk teeth are temporary structures, they do not require hygienic and dental attention.

Importance of Early Dental Care

I cannot overstate the great importance of early dental care. This attention should be given while the youngster is still in the infant stage.
The teeth should be brushed at least twice a day and, as soon as the child is old enough to hold a brush, it should be taught how to brush its teeth.Cavities and other dental defects require dental care even if the teeth are temporary. By having all cavities filled and other defects of the teeth corrected, the child is almost certain to have strong and healthy permanent teeth.In addition to hygienic care, proper food is necessary to nourish and keep the teeth healthy. Foods rich in vitamins and minerals will help to build sound and sturdy teeth. For this reason it is advisable to give the infant and grow-INSTANT RELIEF!

"THE LADY DANCES" by MARGE STANLEY

SYNOPSIS

Search of adventure, Mark Tubot sails from San Francisco aboard the S. S. "Orient" bound for Honolulu. He meets Vanya Prokova, a beautiful dancer, who is being deported. She ignores him. Mark follows Vanya to Tongatabu in the South Seas, trying to convince himself that seeing her in her dance hall environment will cure his infatuation. Percy Loring, a beachcomber, informs Mark that Vanya dances at Pearly Shene's Diver's Helmet when the ships are in but, at the present time, she is inland with the natives. Loring takes Mark to a native festival. They hide in the bushes and watch the ceremonies. Mark utters an exclamation upon seeing Vanya, revealing his and Loring's presence to the natives. They are captured but Vanya intercedes for them and accompanies the pair back through the woods still retaining her frigid attitude. Mark is angry with himself for his interest in her and for the embarrassment of accepting her aid in his trouble. A cobra in their path causes Vanya to go close to Mark for protection. He overcomes the desire to take her in his arms. Next day, Vanya will not accept Mark's thanks; she suggests that he leave her and join Loring. His anger aroused, Mark retorts: "Company of Loring is a distinct improvement over that of a dancer in Pearly Shene's dive." The remark hurts Vanya. Mark tells Loring he will go to see Vanya dance that night just for the joy of seeing her trying to please people.

CHAPTER XVI A Lady Dances

"No," said Mark to Percy Loring. "We won't count these drinks against your quart. Tonight you're my guest. The quart is a separate proposition."

"A gentleman's proposition," replied the beachcomber. "I accept with pleasure."

They sat at a side table in the Diver's Helmet which, for the first time in Mark's short experience, was well-crowded. The crew of the Ellice, lying at anchor in the cove beside Shene's Porpoise, filled the tables and kept Hong busy with their orders. Shene himself stood at the bar; Mark fancied his presence and giant strength were sometimes needed, for it was not a quiet gathering, though as yet a jovial one.

At the piano a small dark-haired man with pudgy hands—Shene's first mate on the Porpoise, according to Loring, was banging out automatic-sounding music with surprising facility. The pieces were ancient enough to Mark's experience, but they were popular melody, and the crowd was not too fussy.

A girl, one of those Mark had seen on his first day at Shene's Cove, had emerged from a back room, and stood smiling beside the piano. She was dressed in costume consisting of a laced bodice and knee-length skirt ornamented with tarnished spangles; it reminded Mark of dance-hall costumes he had seen in Western moving pictures—the sort so popular with the kids in Spring Brook, Connecticut.

"Where do those girls keep themselves during the day?" he asked Loring. "I never see them."

"Oh, they visit around on the islands. The piano struck up a tune, with a thrum of chords. The girl broke into a song, singing in a voice that seemed particularly unmusical to Mark's ears. The ballad was but an innocuous, sentimental affair, concerning itself with a longing for home and mother, but the crowd apparently liked it. A burst of applause greeted its conclusion, and the girl obligingly rendered an encore, breaking into a series of typical burlesque dance steps on the patter chorus. Not good, thought Mark, though he'd seen worse in the islands.

But the audience as a whole was well pleased. Applause and shouts of invitation greeted the conclusion of the second number. Cries of "Have a drink with us!" and "Sit at my table!" rose from the sea-mat. The girl chose her companion and seated herself with a smile.

"Pretty bad," Mark observed to Loring.

"You're too critical," the other replied. "The performance pleased the audience; Pavlova could do no more."

There was an interval of silence from the piano while its performer indulged in a drink or two at the bar. It was ten minutes perhaps before he returned to his post, and the second act in Shene's cabaret was on.

Another girl appeared; save for a different face and figure, and a different, though equally inane song, her act might have been a repetition of the preceding performance. She sang and danced; after the appreciative applause, she danced and sang. Mark had seen the same thing a score of times in his wanderings about the South Seas. Her encore ended, she followed her co-performer among the tables; her shrill laughter mingled with the general hubbub.

There followed another interval of silence.

"How much of this?" asked Mark of Loring.

"Getting impatient? Don't fret—your scornful princess is next. She's the sole remaining member of Shene's staff of entertainers."

"How is Vanya? Better than these?"

Loring shrugged.

"A matter of opinion. Don't you think the present audience would prefer a burlesque show to grand opera? Personally, I think Vanya deserves a better setting than this."

"Artistically she may," granted Mark, thinking of his unpleasant encounter of the morning.

"That's all I refer to I never judge morals."

Mark called Hong for another drink; he purposely ordered the rounds singly, as he had no desire to provide Loring with the means of another such fracas as the one of two nights before—at least, not until he himself was ready to leave.

"Did I tell you," he asked Loring, "that I'm marooned here for a while? I inquired of Shene this afternoon, and the next decent connection I can make is the mail packet at Taulanga—just one month from yesterday."

Loring laughed cynically.

"I'm glad to hear it. You've been a fine prospect for me; I haven't lived so well since I accidentally found a pearl in an oyster I was expecting to eat—and that was two years ago."

"Why the dubious laugh, then?" queried Mark.

"It just seemed to me that if you wanted to leave badly enough you could manage. The Ellice sails for Suva in a day or two; you might find a China-bound tramp there."

Mark crossedly "I want to go to Honolulu; I've changed my mind—I'm going home!"

"What's the matter—disgusted with the South Seas?"

"Disgusted with the mess I made of a voyage intended to be a pleasure trip."

"Maybe the trouble is with your conception of pleasure," said Loring. "Now, take my attitude—Look! There she is!"

Another burst of applause swept the room. Mark looked around with a curious, thrilling palpitation; Vanya stood beside the piano, and—wonder of wonders!—she was smiling. It wasn't really a happy smile; Mark saw at a glance that her eyes retained their solemn depths, but at least the full, pouting lips were parted.

Mark muttered indistinctly, disregarding Loring's amused chuckle.

Vanya was wearing a very long, shimmering evening dress of silk or near-silk that dropped quite to the floor. If it had been pierced and mended here and there, the audience cared little; the sailors were content to accept the gown as the acme of luxury and fashion.

The piano sounded; Vanya began to sing. Another popular American ballad, but her voice was low in pitch, musical, and clear. Mark promptly forgot his threat to laugh at her, and indeed could do nothing but stare. Halfway through her song, the girl's eyes met his for an instant; he saw the faint flush and quick shifting of her gaze. He was thoroughly immersed in the song, thoroughly charmed.

"Her teeth are pretty," he murmured.

"Say," said Loring, "if you're looking for defects in the lady, you'll have to probe deeper than the physical."

The song ended; to Mark's surprise it received quite as much applause as the preceding acts. Vanya smiled, that same sombre smile, Mark thought and bowed slightly in appreciation.

"See?" said Loring. "It's the lady's hauteur, her aloofness, her condescension, that gets the applause. It's a novelty in the islands; they like it."

"To say nothing of her looks, I suppose," Mark muttered.

There came a few inchoate chords from the piano; Vanya was giving an encore. To Mark's utter amazement, she sang the famous "Mon Coeur s'ouvre a ta Voix" from Samson and Delilah—in French!

"My Heart at thy Sweet Voice" she sang, her eyes fixed darkly on the far wall, her accompanist obviously didn't know the melody, but his occasional "ad lib" chords were sufficient.

"See?" said Loring. "It's the lady's hauteur, her aloofness, her condescension, that gets the applause. It's a novelty in the islands; they like it."

"To say nothing of her looks, I suppose," Mark muttered.

There came a few inchoate chords from the piano; Vanya was giving an encore. To Mark's utter amazement, she sang the famous "Mon Coeur s'ouvre a ta Voix" from Samson and Delilah—in French!

"My Heart at thy Sweet Voice" she sang, her eyes fixed darkly on the far wall, her accompanist obviously didn't know the melody, but his occasional "ad lib" chords were sufficient.

Mark stared and listened. Gradually Vanya's eyes seemed drawn to his, and she sang the final half of her song with her gaze fixed on him. He wondered if she had chosen the piece as a sardonic gibe at him; she sang it unsmiling, but clear and sweet.

The applause that she received was generous enough, but puzzled; doubtless the crowd was wondering if it were missing some subtle point.

"Well," said Loring. "That's the first time I've heard that here!"

Vanya bowed, smiled, and retired, ignoring the scattered invitations.

"That's what they like," declared Loring.

"Doesn't she ever mingle?"

"She used to."

"Oh! She did?"

"Don't get excited, comrade. She had a friend last year, a pearly named Bill Torkas. He was on the sexless side of sixty, and he liked her. He died three or four months ago."

"No one else?"

"Not at any one else's table. What did you think of her singing?"

"I thought she danced," said Mark evasively.

"She will."

Time passed; Mark and Loring consumed their drinks and re-ordered, though Mark was drinking little. Loring's potatoes seemed to affect him not at all; his speech and mind were apparently quite normal. Mark thought of the quart of trade whiskey Loring had consumed two nights gone, and ceased to wonder.

A flurry of excitement came when two members of the Ellice's crew, far gone in their cups, began a brawl over one of the girls. Mark was amused at the expert way in which the giant Pearly Shene expelled the two, leaving them to continue their argument in the open.

The first girl sang and danced again, and so did her successor. Mark grew impatient.

"In due time, my friend," soothed Loring. "Ah, Look there!"

Mark looked. Vanya, wearing a long robe of some red-flowered material, was just emerging. Again came that strange emotion; Mark's eyes were simply riveted on the girl.

She advanced to the dais beside the piano, and casually dropped the robe from her shoulders. Mark gasped and gripped the edge of the table. He felt his own face flush, half in anger at his own emotion, half in admiration.

Vanya wore a loose crimson blouse that glowed rudy-like beneath her black hair, and tight black velvet shorts. Her legs—long, slim, rounded—were sheathed in black stockings, and tiny red dancing pumps covered her feet.

"She's beautiful!" he muttered to Loring. "Her legs are exquisite!"

"I don't watch white women's legs," said the beachcomber. "It makes one dissatisfied with the spindly shanks of the native girls."

"But they're beautiful!" repeated Mark.

"They are indeed—aesthetically long and graceful, and not too plump. But so, for that matter, is the rest of her figure."

Vanya danced. The pianist swung into a melody that seemed reminiscent of some music Mark had heard; no matter—it had rhythm, and that was enough. Vanya needed no more than that to create a presence of beauty. Her dance was a wild gypsy sort of thing; to Mark, sophisticated as he was, the Russian motif was plain, like a breath of wind across the steppes. She was light and grace personified, and she danced with an abandon that seemed almost a passion. Mark noted her changed expression, in one movement she danced with head thrown back and closed eyes, and a smile on her lips that seemed ever so true. For that moment she seemed happy.

Then it was over. The applause came; neither more nor less than the audience had granted the other performers. Vanya smiled and bowed, draped herself in her robe and retired.

"Why don't they stamp and cheer?" asked Mark irritably of Loring. "She earned it."

"In your eyes," explained Loring. "They've all seen her before. So you approve?"

"She's marvelous! And that in spite of my personal feelings toward her. As to the applause, I guess it's remarkable that she got any at all from this audience. These pearlys can't appreciate her."

"Appreciation? Bah!" said Loring. "They were doing exactly what you were doing—looking at her legs!"

"She's a great dancer nevertheless."

Program At Library Planned By Community Club Players

One-Act Plays Will Be Presented; Music On Program, Also

Community club players will present the second of two programs of one-act plays in the auditorium of the Salem public library, Friday night at 8. Special music will be supplied by Misses Margaret Kirkbride and Ruth Moff.

The plays, selected by the director, Charles Wilhelm, are two farces and a pantomime. "Service For Two," as the title indicates, has to do with food. The scene is laid in a small restaurant with two men and one woman in the cast. The two men are Charles Stewart and Paul Smith; the girl, Ruth Oberon. The farce, "Furnished Rooms," illustrates the maxim, "There are more ways than one of killing a cat," and has a cast of Charles Stewart, Ruth Moff, Lois Greenstein and Ruth Oberon. A man and his operatically inclined wife go apartment hunting. They inspect an apartment belonging to two sisters, one of whom has just lost her husband (by death). The unfortunate Mr. Green resembles the dead husband.

The third presentation is a pantomime with music played by Miss Margaret Kirkbride. The sketch is unusual in that a number of things, usually inanimate parts of a play, as the situation and the curtain, are parts of the cast itself. "The Duchess Bounces In" cast includes Mary Campbell, Albert Hanna, Paul Smith, Eugene Pettay and Charles Stewart. It has the usual love element in the lovely princess and the knight who love against

BELL DRY CLEANERS, PHO. 244

May Robson, Barbara Stanwyck Stars of Friday 'Double'; 'Biography' Ends

A splendid double bill is scheduled at the State Friday and Saturday each film starring one of the screen's most popular actresses. The first feature is the highly commended production, "The Secret Bride" and stars the lovely Barbara Stanwyck and the second is entitled "Grand Old Girl" starring a grand old actress, May Robson.

In addition to Miss Stanwyck, who at last is given a role that seems worthy of her talents there is a fine supporting cast including Warren William, Arthur Byron, Glenda Farrell, Grant Mitchell, Henry O'Neill and Douglas Dumbrille. The picture, based on the play by Leonard Ide, is a thrilling drama of political intrigue which involves the commission of two baffling murders and the impeachment of the governor of the state on bribery charges. Secretly married to the attorney general, Miss Stanwyck playing the role of the governor's daughter, learns on her wedding day that her father has been charged with bribery and that her own husband has to prosecute him.

William, playing the attorney, hides a letter supposedly written by the governor soliciting the bribe after he has pardoned a big business man who has been imprisoned for embezzlement. The death of an investigator who has made the charges, make the case look even blacker for the governor, who is impeached by the legislature.

It's a thrilling, exciting story well told and brilliantly acted by a superb cast.

Robson Stars

RICH in humor and emotional appeal, "Grand Old Girl" centers around the story of an elderly school teacher who lives only for her "boys and girls". Under the spell of May Robson's artistry, the character of Laura Bayles, gallantly courageous principal of Avondale high school, assumes high proportions.

Plays Teacher

The picture is really a glorification of the American school teacher and pays a fine and stirring tribute to the profession. For more years than she cares to remember, Laura has been principal of the school. Two generations have passed through her classrooms. Among her former pupils is the president of the United States and Laura is mightily proud of the fact.

But she is not so proud of another of her "boys", Click Dade, who runs a milk shop across from the school and Laura has reason to believe the place has a back room where drinking and gambling by the students are encouraged. She launches a one-woman campaign to run Dade out of business and in so doing antagonizes powerful interests in the town.

But Laura is not beaten so easily and she cleans Dade out of a substantial sum of money with his own crooked dice and sets up a rival sweet shop.

Mary Carlisle, Fred MacMurray and Alan Hale are principals in the supporting cast.

TONIGHT the State is showing "Biography of a Bachelor Girl" with Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery and "Live Ghosts", a Stan Laurel-Oliver Hardy comedy.

Relief Project Would Give County 'Morgan's Park,' Madison Township

Columbiana county will have a new 15-acre park in section 18 of Madison township, to be known as Morgan's park, if a proposed project receives approval under President Roosevelt's suggested work relief program.

Initial ground work has been laid for this proposition by Charles F. Baugh of Madison township, who has displayed unusual interest in having one of the most historical spots in Ohio brought to front rank position.

The proposal to establish "Morgan's park" was brought to the attention of the county commissioners this week by Mr. Baugh. He is also planning to immediately interest the East Liverpool Historical society, of which Atty. Walter Mill is president, in furthering the proposed memorial.

When a large granite boulder was erected on the Crubaugh farm, located on the West Point-Cavers rd, to mark the spot where Gen. John H. Morgan, the confederate raider surrendered to Major Rue of the 9th Kentucky cavalry, Aug. 26, 1863. It was not until several years later when a small group of East Liverpool men visited the monument to attach a large inscribed copper plate.

For some years later, the monument stood out in the open, so to speak. Vandals it was later noticed, cut small pieces of stone from the boulder. Came the time later when an iron fence was built about the small site, and a tree was planted at each of the four corners of the fence.

And so, such is the situation surrounding the spot in the county today.

A small sign at the intersection of U. S. route 30 and state route 45 at West Point indicates the location of the Morgan monument.

82, May Be Mayor

WEETON, W. Va., Feb. 7.—Dr. M. S. Holt, a mere 82, will run for re-election as mayor, piling his name on the ballot as an independent. He was first elected when voters wrote his name in on their ballots.

Auto Chiefs Meet

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 7.—Highway and automobile department officials of Ohio and Kentucky, meeting here, indicated continuation of reciprocity between the states, as to recognition of truck and automobile licenses, would be continued. None would make a statement, beyond saying they would report to their superiors, and that orders would issue accordingly.

A Review of the Day's News

By Arthur Brishane

TEN MILLION idle men and more in the United States. Ten million idle acres and more on either side of this railroad running along the Atlantic Coast from Southern Florida to New York. Two of the acres, intensively cultivated, would feed a family.

Texas alone, under intensive cultivation, could feed the entire population of the earth as it exists now, and oil underneath Texas would run all the automobiles. There is an empire for you, in one single state. And we talk about "overpopulation" with so much land not used, and none of it used with full intelligence.

BIG QUESTION of the day: "What will the Supreme Court decide about the gold clause?"

If you saw two collections of savages discussing the merit of cowry shells compared with wampum, as "money," you would say "poor savages."

What are we but "poor savages," worrying about the metallic or paper symbols of wealth, not realizing that earth plus intelligent use of power is the real wealth and the symbol unimportant.

THE TOWNSEND plan, $200 a month to everybody sixty years of age, is solemnly discussed by congress, which ought to be passing a sound, reasonable old-age pension now.

Mr. Townsend plan is interesting in many ways. By taxation on every transaction, on producer, jobber, wholesaler, retailer, manufacturer, buyer, it would practically absorb all available money to turn it over to deserving, or otherwise, persons, aged sixty.

It would "con become necessary for some other Townsend to organize a $200 a month plan for all paupers. There would soon be twice as many paupers as there are people sixty years old.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, supposed to have some brains, would learn with surprise about that Townsend plan, arranged to promote extravagance and waste, saying to each sixty-year-old person:

"You will get two hundred dollars every month, and you must spend it immediately, within the month. No, you may not save some of it to help your grandson through college, or to provide for your granddaughter in her next childbirth."

THAT PLAN to provide automatically for national impoverishment, substituting silly, senile spending on a gigantic scale for old-fashioned thrift, is actually discussed by the congress of the United States, and millions of Americans favor the idiosyncrasy.

No wonder we drift into depression and have millions idle. Anxieties above must smile sadly considering what has been given to the American people, and what a muddle they make of it.

CHICAGO reports the latest "American type" murder. Thomas E. Maloy, veteran head of Chicago's "Motor Pleasure Operators' Union," was killed in the usual way, as he sat at the wheel of his automobile.

The government says Mr. Maloy's career as a "union labor leader" was profitable. He had been indicted and released under $10,000 bail on a charge of failure to report three hundred and fifty thousand dollars income before the assassin's "slugs" cancelled that and other accusations.

Another summer of clean, wholesome outdoor amusement and recreation is in store for the baseball loving fans of the tri-state section according to the home games of the Pittsburgh Pirates as revealed in the National League schedule just released throughout the country by league president, Ford Frick.

As usual, 77 games will be played by the Pirates at Forbes field, eleven with each of the other seven clubs in the league and each club having about an even break in the matter of feature dates, such as opening day, Sunday's and holidays. However, since Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania plays Sunday games, the Buccos have been forced to relinquish some of the holiday plums. Prior to the advent of Sunday ball in the Keystone state, Pittsburgh played all holiday games at home, but, due to the balanced schedule now in vogue through all National league cities playing Sunday ball, the Pirates gave up one holiday last season and must give up two this season. In the 1936 season the Buccos will again have two holidays at home. The only home holiday game this season is Decoration day (May 30) when the Chicago Cubs will be the opposition.

Malone Rejects

Big Pat Malone, fast-ball pitcher traded to the St. Louis Cardinals last fall by Chicago, lined up today with announcement that he had returned his contract unsigned to the Cardinals management.

"If Branch Rickey thinks I will play ball for the figure he offered me, he's crazy," said the National League strike-out king of 1929.

There can't be too much whistle blowing in a basketball game for the members of the Oral club in the Community Center circuit at Cleveland.

The entire team is deaf, and never hears the whistle. Yet the boys know when to stop playing, for, as they say, "we can feel the vibration."

WHO GUARDS THE NETS FOR THE CHICAGO BLACK HAWKS--

Marshall Ruins Ohio U's Hope For Cage Title

"Benny" Berens, the straight shooting center for Ohio university was in fairly good form last night and scored 17 points. But he didn't score enough and Marshall college smothered Ohio university's hope for a Buckeye Conference basketball championship with a 41 to 37 defeat.

Ohio scored 23 points in the last 10 minutes of the game, but Marshall pulled into the lead. It was the first victory of the season in the Buckeye league for Marshall.

Wesleyan Drops Miami
Ohio Wesleyan had trouble with Miami last night at Delaware, but finally won 27 to 22. Miami was out in the lead during the first half and at intermission time was leading 16 to 12. It was in the last seven minutes that Wesleyan recovered and took over the game.

Hiram college, playing most of the season without a home game because of the fire which destroyed the Hiram gymnasium, defeated Kenyon 39 to 32. Hiram accomplished this with that popular old system of piling up a lead and then hanging on to it.

Akron Too Fast
The fast Akron university team, skipping along smoothly in the upper reaches of the Ohio conference standings, defeated Denison. Resting his regulars for the game with Case tonight, Coach Howard Blair used substitutes freely last night.

Bowling Green crushed Heidelberg and made it the occasion for its fifth Ohio conference victory, 46 to 27. Bowling Green had a lead throughout the game and used three teams.

Alex Popeji, a sophomore at Wittenberg, played his first game last night and most everyone but the Dayton team and its enthusiasts was pleased. Popeji scored 12 points and Wittenberg won 35 to 20.

Golfers Take to Slickers, Umbrellas in Initial Round of Sixth Annual Agua Caliente Tourney

(By Associated Press)

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Feb. 7.—Prepared for heavy going and high scores, the cream of American golfing talent brought out slickers and umbrellas today for the initial round of the sixth annual Agua Caliente golf tournament.

Despite yesterday's heavy down-pour officials decided that unless early morning floods set in the $5,000 sweepstakes event would open as scheduled.

Set On "Mudders"
Under prevailing conditions, with the fairways soggy and the reens slow, the better, who stepped to the part-mutual windows to inaugurate wagering on a golf championship, were seeking out the "mudders."

Denny Shute, former British open champion, who won the Los Angeles open several seasons ago in torrential rains, and Fred Morrison, victor here in 1932, when showers interrupted the proceedings, were prime favorites.

But plenty of the other sturdy, long-fitting competitors were hooked upon as outstanding threats. Among these were Wuffy Cox, defending champion, Olin Dutra, Horton Smith, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, leading money winner of the golfing tours of the Californias this season.

COLUMBIANA TO HIT PALESTINE
Wlad's Lads Now Tied With Sebring In Tri-County League

COLUMBIANA, Feb. 6.—Coach Jimmy Wlad's Columbiana High school basketball team will reach the climax of a successful season Friday night when Coach Perry Van Hynning's East Palestine lads appear on the local floor in a Tri-county game.

The local boys are now tied with Sebring for the league leadership. Coach Wlad will no doubt depend on the same lineup which so successfully defeated Minerva last week: Fisher and Manchester at forward; Reinehr center; and Wenderson and Ritchie guards. Fisher, although a freshman, is now regarded as the scoring ace of the red and white. In addition to the Reserve game, another preliminary will be played at 6:30 p. m.

Roumanians Face Canton Quintet
The Canton Roumanians, last year's champs of that league, will face the Salem Roumanians here Saturday night on the Memorial building floor in a game which will have an important bearing on the second round championship.

Salem and Canton boast the two most powerful quintets in the loop. The game is scheduled to start at 7:30 p. m.

Quite a 'B' Team
NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—A basketball team composed of players whose names begin with "B" that would stand any even chance of beating any college in the country are the following: Bennett of Westminster and Bender of L. I. U. forwards; Borries of Navy, center; and Bonnwell of Dartmouth and Birch of Duquesne, guards.

Each one is among the five leading scorers in his respective league to his temple in 1917.

He must have made hundreds of thousands. He got as high as $10,000 for flattening Ian Haig, champion of England, in London in 1909.

He's 49 now, absolutely destitute, and a cataract has blinded the eye Fulton left him.

"First thing I learned," he said, "was you didn't break no knuckles hitting 'em in the body. So I hit 'em there. They sure come down when you hit 'em right."

The toughest fight he ever had was the 1914 battle with Wills, in Los Angeles, when he was nailed with a right under the gun, was floored three times in the first round, three more in the second, again in the third, and came back to knock the "Black Menace" out in the 14th.

"Ah sure was glad to get rid of that man that night," he said. "But the greatest fighter of them all, in those days, was another Negro, Joe Walcott, the Barradoes Demon, who never weighed as much as 150 pounds, yet knocked out good heavyweights with a punch."

"Fifteen rounds I fought him a draw in Manchester, N. H., in 1904, and man, could he hit? He hit me on the chin with a right in the 6th, and for three rounds I couldn't swallow. I saw him hit a heavy-

Warren Steels Take Game From Althouse Studebakers, 42-35

Steels Make Offensive Effective In Closing Minutes of Play to Overtake Salem Lead; Trade Class and Pennzip Girls Win Their Games

The efforts of the Althouse Studebakers, classy Salem basketball combine, to crash the win column again, failed last night, although the Studebaker terrors had the strong Warren Thomas Steele's trailing on the Memorial hall floor up until the closing minutes of play.

The Steels won, 42 to 35, in a maze of long shots and buckets from close range which bewildered the Salem team in the last five minutes of the game. Warren even overtook a threatening spurt started by Salem when the fourth quarter started.

Studebakers led 18 to 15 at the half and 29 to 23 at the end of the third period.

Outclassed the Visitors
The locals made a ball game of it in the second and third periods when they crashed the Warren defense and held off the Steels' attack when they themselves were on the defensive side. While the Steels amassed a total of 19 points in the final set, the Salemites were at a loss in their attempts to sink either long or short buckets.

The Warren attack was led by Jaskela, center, who accounted for 14 points. Avery and Lychock each got nine points.

Nedelka, who found the hoop for several long ones, also got 14 points for the locals. M. Linder was close behind with 11 points. Earley, Studebaker center, reached the limit on fouls committed and had to leave the game around the half.

Two other games were on tap for the basketball fans last night. Salem Trades Class effectively checked the advances of the Wiloughby Trades Class squad, and led by Schaffer and Miller with 11 and 10 points, respectively, defeated the visitors, 34 to 23. Johnson was best for Wiloughby with 10 points.

The Pennzip Girls, scheduled to play the Lisbon Girls, met the Saxon feminine tossers and defeated them, 13 to 11, when the Lisbonites failed to appear. Dervan dumped in seven points for the winners. Roesser got four.
